Tuesday: Day 1 – Dublin to Ballycastle

Highlights: Belfast Wall Mural Taxi Tour, The Antrim Coast Drive – Waterfalls, Glens, & Villages, Waterfront Stay in Ballycastle

Meet your guide and trip participants and begin your Irish adventure. You'll leave Dublin and go north towards Belfast, the capital of Northern Ireland (UK). Here, in the ancient province of Ulster, the Irish Highlands begin and even the brogue accent nods to our Scottish neighbors, a mere stone's throw to the east.

Early on you'll hit a bustling Belfast where you'll get a behind-the-scenes tour of Belfast's storied past and the inside scoop from a chatty local cabbie. The large-scale murals and massive peace wall are exceptional and not to be missed.

Afterwards you'll journey along the gorgeous Antrim coast road, past the beautiful harbor towns of Carnlough and Cushendun. Considered one of the great scenic roads of the world, this winding route opened up the nine glens of Antrim, which until its completion in 1842, were only accessible by sea. Along the way, you head inland to the "Queen of the Glens," the magical glacial valley of Glenariff. In the heart of the glen, you'll find a botanical oasis set amidst cascading waterfalls in a clover covered gorge.

Your journey continues along this stunning coastline to grasp sight of Scotland, Ireland's closest neighbor before pausing for a night's rest in the lovely seaside town of Ballycastle. The night is yours to stroll the beach, sip a pint, or simply savor the views of Rathlin Island flanked by Scotland's peninsulas.

Wednesday: Day 2 – Ballycastle to Culdaff

Highlights: Giant's Causeway, Inishowen Peninsula, Malin Head, Country Town of Culdaff

Awakening refreshed by the sea air, you'll hit the ground running to beat the crowds and experience the amazing Giant's Causeway. Descending into the ocean, its weird geological landscape is stacked with thousands of hexagonally shaped stone columns. This natural wonder has attracted visitors for hundreds of years and its geological importance has made it a World Heritage site. Step, skip and ponder this whimsical geology, laid out as if carved by the hands of giants.

Striding onwards, the route leads to Lough Foyle where you'll cross by ferry back to the Republic of Ireland. After a tasty lunch, spend the rest of your day exploring the lesser-known and truly wonderful Inishowen Peninsula. While sparsely populated, it is Ireland's largest peninsula and is packed full of ancient relics, extraordinary vistas, deserted beaches, and thatch-roofed cottages.

You'll head right up to the northernmost point of Ireland, Malin Head. This wild and rugged headland has set the scene for ancient myths of gods and heroes. Its dramatic shores continue to create epic tales, even providing the backdrop for the recent Star Wars movies. It's a short stroll into town along the serene shoreline where you can enjoy the local chat and grab a pint or a bite to eat.
